

Seelye House

Seelye House uses a gas fired hot water boiler to heat the building. The hot water that is produced by the boiler is then circulated throughout the building. The temperature of the building is controlled by turning the dial on the thermostat which is located in the hallway of the first floor to the desired setting. Please note that the radiators can not be blocked by beds, desks, etc. They need airflow for proper heat operation.

