“The Future of the Humanities in the Age of Technics”
Lectures & Panels Sponsored by the Frost Library and the Copeland Colloquium

All Events in the Periodicals Room of Frost Library

FALL

- “The book is dead! Long live the book!” - September 16th, 3:00pm
  - Niko Pfund, President of Oxford University Press
- “The future of the literary magazine: conversation with three top editors” - October 20th, 7:00pm
  - Jen Aker, Moderator, The Common
  - Ann Kjellberg, New York Review of Books
  - Wyatt Mason, Harper’s
  - Cullen Murphy, Vanity Fair
- “Is English the universal language? And, if so, what are the implications for language instruction?” - October 25th, noon
  - Sara Brenneis, Assistant Professor of Spanish
  - Jay Caplan, Professor of French
  - Wako Tawa, Professor of Asian Languages & Civilizations
- “The future of the humanities from where I sit: thoughts from the Copeland Fellows.” - November 15th, 3:30pm
  - Anne-Lise Francois, Copeland Fellow
  - Claire Katz, Copeland Fellow
  - Premesh Lalu, Copeland Fellow
  - Ruth Miller, Copeland Fellow
- “Is there a future for humanities publishing?” - December 1st, noon
  - Bryn Geffert, Librarian of the College

SPRING

- “Scientific advances and humanistic responses: How do developments in science, biotechnology, neuroscience, computation, or technology challenge us to rethink what it means to be human?” January 31st, 3:30pm
  - Reflections by scientists:
    - J. P. Baird, Associate Professor of Psychology
    - Michael Hood, Associate Professor of Biology
    - Cathy McGeoch, Professor of Computer Science
  - Responses from humanists:
    - Thomas Dumm, Professor of Political Science
    - Andrew Poe, Visiting Assistant Professor of Political Science
    - Adam Sitze, Assistant Professor of Law, Jurisprudence, & Social Thought
- “Translation in the Age of GoogleTranslate” - March 9th, noon
  - Cathy Ciepiela
  - Laure Katsaros
  - Andrew Parker
- “Undergraduates and Public Scholarship in the Humanities: Reading, Interpreting, and Editing Wikipedia.” March 27th, noon
  - Scott Payne, IT
  - Missy Roser, Library
  - Martha Saxton, History