May, 2018

Professor XXXXX
Department of XXXX

Dear XXXXX,

Early in the second semester of the academic year 2018–2019, the Committee of Six will consider recommendations for promotion to the rank of full professor. According to our records, XXXXX is eligible for consideration for promotion. Although our procedures are not legislated or rigidly established, promotion from associate to full professor usually occurs after six to eight years of service at the rank of associate professor. The procedures for promotion, which I will describe below, are available online.

Promotion may originate with the department or with the candidate. If you wish to bring the case forward, you should let my office know by letter by October 1, 2018. If either the candidate or the department decides to bring the candidate’s case forward, a Promotion Committee will be constituted. This committee will consist of all tenured full professors in the candidate’s department and, at the request of the candidate, may include up to two other tenured full professors from the Amherst faculty, chosen by the candidate in consultation with the dean of the faculty. I select the chair of the Promotion Committee, who, like the other members of the committee, must be a full professor, and is normally the senior member of the department. By November 2, 2018, I will appoint the Promotion Committee and name the chair. Once the committee is constituted, the chair will arrange for the committee to meet in a timely fashion.

The faculty has voted that promotion is not automatic. The Committee of Six will review each recommendation on its merits. A Promotion Committee’s recommendation for promotion should affirm that the individual’s achievements and qualifications have progressed beyond those noted at the time of the tenure decision (or beyond first hire as a tenured associate professor). The bases for promotion to professor are essentially the same as those used for the tenure decision: teaching effectiveness, sustained scholarly growth, and contribution to the general life of the college community. Promotion consideration is an occasion for a genuine review, in which all members of the Promotion Committee are expected to participate. The Promotion Committee’s letter should give assurance that all members have participated in the review process. If there are significant doubts about the candidate’s progress in rank, the Promotion Committee should discuss them candidly with the individual.

After the committee has decided on its recommendation, a letter from the chair of the committee, which discusses the candidate’s scholarly or artistic growth and achievement, teaching performance, and college and professional service, is signed by all members of the Promotion Committee. The letter should describe the evidence that leads the Promotion Committee to affirm the individual’s continued effectiveness and growth, both as a teacher and as a scholar. In the case of teaching, if the individual generated new courses or helped strengthen the department’s curriculum, this should be addressed in the evaluation.
Please provide my office with three binders (see attached template) containing the following materials, as well as an electronic copy of the materials by noon on December 14, 2018:

- One signed original of the Promotion Committee’s recommendation letter and two copies
- The candidate’s up-to-date curriculum vitae

Candidates have the option to submit a letter on their own behalf to me by November 30, 2018. The Committee of Six strongly encourages candidates to write this letter. Candidates may also choose to provide the letter to the department to offer additional information to you as you consider this case.

If you have questions about these procedures, please let me or Janet know before submitting your recommendation.

All best,
Catherine

Catherine Epstein
Dean of the Faculty
Winkley Professor of History

CE/pk
cc: Candidate
Department chair or senior member of the department
ADC
Janet Tobin
Pamela Korenewsky